

Water Night at Kirkwall, September 29, 7pm

with the wellington *Water*watchers.ca

Record droughts and temperatures have been encountered in most of Ontario and the eastern US. Agriculture has been severely affected with crop failures and low yields the norm. The natural environment is highly stressed as climate change amplifies an already concerning situation. These issues will be addressed while providing an overview of just how precious and critical water is to our survival and what myths exist about its abundance. Threats to our water will also be discussed and what role public policy and privatisation play in the continuing story of ever increasing demand for water.

About The Presenter
